T error's (New York Times-Tue, Feb 16, 1962)
Aid for the Dutch in New Guinea should be urged, the Administration is criticized for not helping New Guinea, on which the Dutch are apparently going to back down.

The Dutch must not be allowed to be squeezed out of their position, and the Administration should do all it can to help them.

The Dutch are facing a difficult situation, and the Administration should not abandon them.

The Administration's failure to help the Dutch is a serious mistake.

Charging Divorce Laws

National Failure to Face Basic Charges Questioned

T error's (New York Times-Tue, Feb 16, 1962)
A bill calling for divorce laws in the United States should be questioned.

The current divorce laws are not fair to either party, and the bill should be examined closely.

The bill should consider the impact of divorce on children and the economic situation of both parties.

The bill should also address the psychological impact of divorce on the parties involved.

The bill should consider the possibility of alternative solutions, such as mediation and reconciliation.

The bill should be debated thoroughly before it is passed.
